

HomeAdvisor Partners with Affirm to Bring Flexible Pay-Over-Time Financing Options to Homeowners

December 17, 2020

For the First Time Homeowners on HomeAdvisor Can Now Pay Over Time for Hundreds of Home Improvement, Repair and Maintenance Projects

DENVER, Dec. 17, 2020 /PRNewswire/ -- HomeAdvisor, a leading digital home services marketplace and operating business of ANGI Homeservices (NASDAQ: ANGI), is partnering with Affirm, a flexible and transparent alternative to credit cards, to offer easy to understand flexible payment options for HomeAdvisor customers. HomeAdvisor is the first home services marketplace to offer Affirm's transparent pay-over-time options with no hidden fees to customers for hundreds of home projects.

Now when homeowners pay for a project through HomeAdvisor Pay via the HomeAdvisor app, they will be able to select Affirm at checkout. With Affirm, consumers can check eligibility in seconds, and if approved, select from term lengths ranging from three to 36 months. For example, a $5,000 project would cost $452 per month over twelve months with 15% APR. Consumers will see the Affirm "buy now, pay later" option when paying for hundreds of projects using HomeAdvisor Pay.

"Payment is a particularly stressful part of the home services experience, be it due to unexpected expenses or the lack of transparency around the cost of many home improvement projects," said Brandon Ridenour, Chief Executive Officer, ANGI Homeservices. "With the launch of our digital payment system and now the partnership with Affirm, we are making it fast and easy to book, finance and pay for any home improvement job, no matter the project type or size. Our homes are one of the largest investments we will make in our lives and require constant maintenance and work. With HomeAdvisor, every customer now has an opportunity to either maintain or upgrade their homes on their budget and their terms."

"People have spent more time in their homes this year than ever before, and many have been investing in making their living spaces more comfortable. This includes increased spending on everything from home repairs and improvement projects, to new furniture and appliances," said Silvija Martincevic, Chief Commercial Officer, Affirm. "We're thrilled to partner with HomeAdvisor to bring flexibility and transparency to the way people pay for home service projects. Now, homeowners can pay for these projects over time in simple, easy-to-understand payments without any concern of hidden or late fees."

HomeAdvisor customers will also be able to use Affirm at checkout for our instant pre-priced projects as well as any managed project.

The procurement of home services is quickly going digital as more consumers find and hire pros online. Over the last 12 months, consumers turned to our brands for over 28 million home projects. However, traditional payment methods, like cash or check, make up the majority of the ways that homeowners pay for home projects. According to HomeAdvisor Research's 2019 State of Home Spending Report, 60 percent of consumers still pay for their home service projects via traditional methods like cash or check and a poll from Bankrate found that 41% of Americans did not have enough savings to cover a $1000 emergency. One of the most common home emergencies, water damage, ranges in cost but is typically a few thousand dollars.

Since its initial rollout in April 2020 amid the beginning of the pandemic, HomeAdvisor's digital payment platform, HomeAdvisor Pay has facilitated tens of millions of dollars of total payments, processing on average $1 million each week. The feature delivers both pros and homeowners a contactless payment method that removes the friction associated with traditional payment options that often require frequent trips to the bank, handwritten checks, delayed invoicing and steep additional fees for small businesses. Now with the addition of Affirm, homeowners and pros have even more flexible payment solutions.
